NOBILE SAW RESCUE PASS BY UNSEEING

Norwegian Fliers Unable to See Lost Crew of Italia

(Copyrighted, 1928, By The Associated Press.)

Kings Bay, Spitzbergen, June 18—(AP)—Captain Riiser-Larsen and Lieutenant Luetzow Holm, Norwegian fliers, who flew over the Nobile party off Northeast Land late yesterday without sighting them, were planning a new reconnaissance today.

The two airmen took off at 6 o'clock last night from the steamship Braganza and flew from North Cape to the point where General Nobile and his five men companions are on the ice five miles east of Foyin Island. Both planes carried provisions and clothes for the stranded men but the aviators saw nothing of them or of their eleven companions who have been missing for many weeks.

Although the fliers in their two planes apparently were over General Nobile and his men over a period of at least one hour, they saw nothing of them.

Tragic Irony

The Nobile party, however, with tragic irony was able to see the would-be rescuers but was unable to attract their attention to point out where they were. General Nobile later sent a wireless to the base ship Citta di Milano at Kings Bay reporting that he and his party had sighted the planes but without avail.

This information was felt at Kings Bay to indicate how difficult it will be to locate the Nobile party on the wide ice terrain where they are stranded.

To aid further searches Nobile gave his present position as 88.33 north and 37.12 east. This would put him about five miles to the east of Foyin Island.

The fliers at once prepared to change the motors of their planes and set out again for the new position.

Commander Romagna of the Citta di Milano said he believed that since Nobile had now definitely established his location the party would probably be found on the Norwegians' next flight.

ROME GETS MESSAGE

Rome, June 18—(AP)—The Stefani News Agency announced today that General Nobile had informed the base ship Citta di Milano by radio that he had seen two seaplanes flying to rescue him. He said he had pointed out his exact position to the planes. Captain Riiser-Larsen and Lieutenant Luetzow, the fliers, however, returned from their flight and reported they had not seen the missing men of the Italia. They flew from the ice breaker Braganza, which sailed to the north of Spitzbergen with their plane aboard.

Nobile in reporting to the base ship gave his position as 88.33 north and 37.12 east which would put him about five miles east of Foyin Island and about eight miles from the position he had previously given.

This definite location, Commander Romagna of the base ship Citta di Milano believed, would aid in finding the marooned men on the next flight of the seaplanes.

Death Denies Girl Chance on Broadway

Chicago, June 18—(AP)—Death has denied pretty Rolfe Cline, dancing comedienne of "Sunny Days," her one big chance—stardom on Broadway. She was fatally injured early yesterday when the automobile in which she was riding with three friends struck a lamp post on Michigan Boulevard.

The automobile ride was in celebration of Miss Cline's acceptance of the offer of a leading role in a forthcoming New York musical show.

Miss Audrey Maple, appearing in the same cast with Miss Cline, was one of those injured. A month ago she filed suit here to divorce George E. Griffiths, of New York.

Two chorusesmen, Herbert Carmichael and William Tasker, were the others in the car, besides the Negro chauffeur. Their injuries, like those of Miss Maple, were not serious.

The automobile ride which cost her life was in the nature of a celebration of her getting the big chance. Just as the sun was rising out of Lake Michigan the car turned into Michigan Avenue. The brakes locked, and the car swung into the lamp post.

HOLD ROBBERS SUSPECTS.

Carlinville, Ill., June 18—(AP)—Two men arrested here as suspects in the $19,000 holdup of the Tonne Trust Company Bank at Kansas City, Mo., last Wednesday, were being held today for questioning by Kansas City police.

HEAVY RAINS IN WISCONSIN KEEP CHIEF AT LODGE

President Unable to Visit His Office at Superior

Superior, Wis., June 18—(AP)—Pouring rain which changed the road between Cedar Island Lodge and Superior into quagmires in places, persuaded President Coolidge today to postpone for one day more his visit to his summer executive offices.

A tentative engagement to receive William M. Butler, chairman of the National Republican Committee, who arrived in Superior today, was kept by Mr. Coolidge, however, by inviting the chairman to visit him at the lodge.

The slight abrasion on the right heel from which Mr. Coolidge was limping when he left Washington was believed to have also influenced him not to come to Superior today. The abrasion, although not serious, bothers the Chief Executive in walking.

Mr. Butler arrived in Superior by an early train and got into touch immediately with Everett Sanders, Secretary to the President, and Edward T. Clark, Mr. Coolidge's personal secretary. A telephone call to the executive residence brought forth an announcement that Mr. Coolidge would not come to Superior today and an invitation to Mr. Butler to drive out immediately.

No Definite Purpose

Before leaving for Cedar Island Lodge accompanied by Col. Osma Lathrobe, military aide to the President, Butler said that he had no definite purpose in visiting Mr. Coolidge. He disclaimed any intention of giving the chief executive a complete word picture of the Kansas City convention, from which he has just arrived, saying that doubtless Everett Sanders, who also attended the convention, had already done so.

The President attended church yesterday morning in Brule, a hamlet six miles from Cedar Island Lodge. Worshipping for the first time in Wisconsin, President Coolidge chose the tiny whitewashed church at Brule, at which a 69-year-old blind lay minister for years has been preaching to a small congregation.

Was Simple Service

It was a great day for the little church and for the occasion it had been revarnished and decorated. The service itself, however, was unaltered from the simple ceremonial followed each Sunday. Sitting alone in a white pine pew, President Coolidge heard old favorite hymns sung with only a piano to lead the choir of four male voices to which, as the single congregation to the occasion, a soprano from Superior had been added.

John Taylor, the blind preacher, conducted the service. From memory he quoted twelve verses of the Gospels as the day's lesson. Later, with strong voice and vigorous gestures, he delivered a sermon for which he took the same text as the lesson he had just recited; the twenty first chapter of the Gospel according to St. John, where the second appearance of Christ to the disciples by the lake of Tiberias is related.

At the end of the service President Coolidge, instead of taking, as is the custom, the arm of the day's preacher and being by him escorted out of the church, reversed the procedure. He clasped the blind preacher's arm with his and leading him gently out of the little frame chapel guided him down the few steps of the church into the street.

SALVATION ARMY WORKERS DECLARE THEIR PURPOSES

Dixonites are Told of Aims and Purposes of Drive

The local committee in charge of the Salvation Army drive in Dixon this week, this morning issued the following statement:

Citizens of Dixon: In the course of this week the Salvation Army will appeal to the people of our city for financial support of its work in northern Illinois.

The American people are always ready to support the work of The Salvation Army, not so much as a duty to charity, but as a business investment in humanity and in better citizenship.

The Salvation Army has gained a wonderful hold over people seldom touched by other welfare organizations. They have been pioneers in finding a way to help the poor and needy without lowering their sense of self-respect. With them a man may be down, but he is never out. They despair of no man and the one claim upon their assistance is a man's need. No matter how unfavorably he may be known to the police, The Salvation Army will receive him, speak frankly, advise wisely, and do all in its power to put the man on the road to right living and selfhelpfulness.

In every variety of their manifold enterprises they have won the respect and confidence of practically every class of society. Their wonderful work among the soldiers engaged in the world war is known of all men. No work done by other organizations won more praise and appreciation than that done by The Salvation Army. What the Salvation Army did for our boys "over there" is now doing for the homeless, the helpless, the most unfortunate of our fellowmen, the people who need our help most.

Through its Rescue Home and Maternity Hospital the Salvation Army renders a great service to Dixon and Lee county. A number of girls from Lee county find refuge in the Salvation Army Rescue Home every year.

The goal of the financial appeal in Dixon is $1000. The funds collected in this city will be turned over to Wil-

THREE KNOWN DEAD IN FLOODS WHICH STRUCK SOUTHWEST

Damage of Million or More Reported from Flooded Areas

Newport, Ark., June 18—(AP)—Heavy rains Saturday night and early Sunday checked the fall of the swollen White river here and will keep it stationary for the next 24 hours but general improvement in the flood situation was reported today.

Red Cross workers went out in motor boats today to survey the region. Indications were that the approximately 1,000 refugees would be able to return to their homes by the latter part of the week.

Damage Over Million

Kennett, Mo., June 18—(AP)—Unrelenting in the battle against the rampaging St. Francis river, which has driven a thousand families from their homes in southeast Missouri, a citizens' army pushed its strength against a 600-foot levee seven miles above the newest crevasse and early today apparently had won a skirmish from the river.

The total area submerged by three crevasses in two days was approximately a hundred thousand acres. Damage to crops and farms was estimated between a million and a half and two million dollars.

AT LEAST THREE DEAD

Kansas City, June 18—(AP)—Storms in southwestern Oklahoma and southern Kansas over the week end claimed at least three lives, went upwards of 100 injured and hundreds homeless.

Relief workers today reported approximately 2,000 were homeless in southwestern Oklahoma where tornadoes Saturday night swept through a fertile farming district leaving a trail of debris 40 miles long and from three to five miles wide. The towns of Blair and Headrick were hardest hit. Three persons were killed at Blair and scores injured as the twister sped on toward Headrick, where three negroes were believed to have perished.

The damage to buildings and livestock losses in Jackson, Kiowa and Tillman counties was estimated at more than half a million dollars.

While rescue parties today combed the residents of the Oklahoma storm area had been accounted for, Otis Rice, was missing.

Tornadoes caused considerable property damage yesterday in the vicinity of Chanute and Emporia, Kansas. Salina also was struck by a high wind that unroofed buildings. No loss of life was reported in Kansas.

CONCENTRATE ON LEVEE

Kennett, Mo., June 18—(AP)—Volunteers today concentrated on levee No. 4, south of here, to prevent a further break in the flooded St. Francis river which through three crevasses has inundated a large portion of the county.

The Mills levee, north of Campbell, which protects a large farming area, was withholding the pressure satisfactorily at noon. The St. Francis fell six inches there last night but today it rose again to its former level.

A great reservoir is being formed by the three breaks in the levee.

O. S. Harrison, Dunklin county chairman of the Red Cross, estimated the overflow at present covers 75,000 acres of land, 50 percent of which is in cultivation.

The town of Wilhelmina, near Campbell, is under water and residents are using boats to get from one point to another. Water is within the limits of the towns of Granville and Glenonville, but has not spread into the business streets.

CAMPAIGN DISCUSSED

Washington, June 18—(AP)—Presidential campaign activities were discussed today by Secretary Hoover, Republican nominee, as delegates returning from the Kansas City National Convention conferred with him.

Heading the Hoover engagement list were W. W. Atterbury, president of the Pennsylvania Railroad and Republican National committee-man from Pennsylvania, and John Q. Tilson of Connecticut, House leader. Both of them were prominent among the delegates which awarded Hoover the presidential nomination. A half dozen other returning delegates saw the Secretary briefly, but James W. Good, his campaign manager, had not reached Washington.

Faces Busy Week

All of the conferences—the first of a long series which the nominee expects to hold this week—dealt with campaign outlooks. There are some differences of opinion on the minor issues, but the closest aides of the Secretary are fairly well in agreement in favoring his early departure for Palo Alto.

Secretary Hoover's usual summer schedule calls for a vacation there and it is pointed out that with the growing importance of radio mechanism, his official campaign opening, the speech of response to a convention committee which notifies him of his selection, can be staged most effectively in California.

CURTIS IN CHICAGO

Chicago, June 18—(AP)—Senator Charles Curtis of Kansas, Republican Vice-Presidential nominee, arrived here today en route to Washington to attend a conference of the Republican National Committee. He was accompanied by his daughter, Mrs. Webster Knight of Providence, R. I., who seconded his nomination at the Kansas City convention; Mr. Curtis' sister, Mrs. Edward Gann, and her husband.

Mrs. Knight with a smile said that Senator Borah in nominating her father, in reality nominated a man who does not exist because he gave the senator a middle initial, while he has none. Senator Borah, she said, referred to him as "Charles L. Curtis".

"I think it was nice of the delegates to permit me to second my father's nomination," she said. "This was my first experience in politics and I enjoyed it very much."

Several Accidents Near Dixon Sunday

MISS EARHART IN FRIENDSHIP LANDS SAFELY

Plane Came to Rest on Water in Welch Village at Noon

BULLETIN

Burry Port, June 18—(AP)—The trans-Atlantic monoplane Friendship, with Miss Amelia Earhart, Wilmer Stultz and Louis Gordon aboard, left Burry Port, at 5:37 o'clock this afternoon for Southampton.

BULLETIN

Harbor Grace, N. F., June 18—(AP)—A difference of opinion among members of the crew of the monoplane Columbia as to plans for its flight was admitted today by Oliver Leboutillier, one of the two pilots. He said that while he favored starting the flight for England tomorrow morning and flying back to America at the first favorable opportunity, other members of the crew were talking of flying back to New York, taking the plane to England by steamer and then attempting the westward flight across the Atlantic.

BULLETIN

Cardiff, Wales, June 18—(AP)—Eye witnesses to the landing of the trans-Atlantic monoplane Friendship state that the plane had a narrow escape from disaster just before landing, passing within thirty yards of a chimney stack at the Burry Port copper works.

Burry Port, Wales, June 18—(AP)—Carrying the first woman ever to cross the Atlantic by air, the American monoplane Friendship gracefully swept down on Burry Estuary on the south coast of Wales, shortly after noon today, completing a brilliant 2,000 mile hop across the northern Atlantic in less than 24 hours.

It was more than just a hop across the Atlantic for Miss Amelia Earhart, Boston social worker, who was one of the crew of the plane—she took her turn at the stick just as did Wilmer Stultz the chief pilot in the long journey through mist and rain that marked most of the trip.

Touched Shore

Out of gas and seeking for a haven, Stultz brought the great plane down gently between Burry Port and Llanelli and brought her to a stop with her pontoons just touching the shore.

The correspondent for The Associated Press, who came to Burry Port from Swansea by motor boat, went out to the plane in a small boat to have a few words with Miss Earhart. She was found eating a frugal lunch on the seaplane, by this time high and dry on a sand bank.

The American girl expressed gratification at realizing her ambition to fly the Atlantic and asked that greetings be sent to her American friends. "I always felt sure that the Friendship could do it and I was right," she said. "The conditions were not very favorable, but I can honestly say I never felt the slightest anxiety. The plane behaved beautifully and there never has been the sign of engine trouble, the only real difficulty being that of steering the course."

Bad Weather Predominant
Bad weather and heavy mist, accompanied the Friendship for the greater part of her journey, while rain was almost incessant. Pilot Wilmer Stultz told The Associated Press correspondent:

"As you know," he said, "we hopped off from Newfoundland at 9:51 o'clock yesterday morning and intended landing in Ireland. However, lack of fuel forced our hand and we had to look for a landing place elsewhere."

Stultz was in the best of spirits and immediately went off to the telephone to give news of the arrival of the Friendship and to order fresh supplies of gasoline.

He said it was the intention of the crew to proceed to Bristol, which was their destination, as soon as possible.

London, June 18—(AP)—The trans-Atlantic monoplane Friendship, carrying the first woman ever to span the Atlantic by air, landed at Burry Port, Wales, at 12:40 p. m. today, just 20 hours and 49 minutes after taking off from Trepassy, Newfoundland.

The plane, which had been sighted 75 miles west of Ireland by the steamship America, landed in Burry Inlet because of a shortage of fuel, Wilmer Stultz, the pilot, bringing his ship down without difficulty close to shore.

Amelia Earhart, Boston social worker and co-pilot of the plane, came ashore with her companions in a motor boat which set out immediately.

Message from Plane
The first definite message that the Friendship had succeeded in crossing the Atlantic came this morning from Captain George Fried, commander of the steamship America, who identified the plane by its number.

Captain Fried sent the message to the London office of The Associated Press. The message read:

"Seventy-five miles southeast of Queenstown (Cobh) the seaplane Friendship NX-4204 circled overhead and attempted to drop two notes on board but was not successful. The plane then flew north."

(Signed) "Fried."

(NX-4204 is the number on the rudder of the trans-Atlantic plane Friendship.)

Were On Watch
Captain Fried's sighting of the Friendship was not an accident as he was watching for her. The jovial commander, who was the hero of the Antiope rescue of several years ago, is intensely interested in trans-Atlantic flying and had made plans to be on the keenest lookout for the plane.

Before sailing from Southampton yesterday, the Captain plotted the Friendship's probable course and announced confidently that he expected to sight the plane. When Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh crossed the Atlantic, Captain Fried diverted the course of his ship to the north and was on the bridge almost continuously for 24 hours watching for the Spirit of St. Louis. He also arranged special searchlights at night and a heavy smokescreen by day to attract the plane. On this occasion he missed the trans-Atlantic flier by about thirty miles only.

Landed Without Warning
The Friendship, without warning, slipped in over Bristol Channel which is at the mouth of the river Severn and came down in Burry Estuary several miles off Burry Port.

It was 12:40 p. m. just 20 hours and 7 minutes after the Friendship took off from Trepassey, Newfoundland, where she had been held about ten days by unfavorable weather conditions and difficulty in making a takeoff with her great load of gasoline.

The tri-motored ship, the first equipped with pontoons to make the direct crossing, came to rest as the tide was fully out and the pontoons soon drove their noses into the sand close to shore.

A launch was sent out immediately

INDIANS TAP PIPELINE
WHEN OUT OF GASOLINE
Farmington, N. M., June 18—(AP)—Two Navajo braves, called Breech Cloth and Flour Sack Packs, did some original thinking when their motor car ran out of gasoline in the great open spaces.

A pipe line is near the highway. The oil in it is crude, but near enough to gasoline for running a motor. The Indians tapped a hole in the pipe, filled their gasoline tank and drove on to their hogans.

The leak in the line was traced to them.

Isn't this the Healo weather? If ately from the coastguard station.

Crew Not Tired
The crew of the Friendship, which included Louis Gordon, mechanic, was in the best of spirits and looked none the worse for their 21-hour flight across the almost 2,000-mile stretch between Newfoundland and Great Britain.

Although the plane settled down off a swampy region some distance from the little town of Burry Port, which had never dreamed of its arrival, it was not long before hundreds of spectators were on the scene.

Crowds of people on foot and by motor rushed to the port and the nearby city of Llanelli and gave the aviators a great reception.

In the confusion of news from Burry Port, reports were received in London that there had been four passengers on the plane, including Lincoln Ellsworth, the American explorer. These reports could not be confirmed immediately because of difficulty in communication. Advice from New York definitely stated that Mr. Ellsworth was in that city.

Ran Short of Fuel
The fliers were in the best of spirits as they landed. Stultz told The Associated Press that the plane had been forced to land because of a shortage of fuel. He said that bad weather and a heavy mist accompanied the ship the greater part of the journey while rain was almost incessant.

Stultz immediately made preparations to obtain fresh supplies of gasoline to proceed to Bristol as soon as possible.

UNEXPECTED ARRIVAL
Burry Port, Wales, June 18—(AP)—While all England and Ireland waited on tiptoe this morning to welcome the American trans-Atlantic plane Friendship from her Atlantic flight, Miss Amelia Earhart, the first woman to conquer the great ocean by air, and her two companions settled down unexpectedly in Burry Estuary, Wales, shortly after noon today.

The London newspaper this afternoon were publishing reports that four persons were aboard the plane including Lincoln Ellsworth, but this apparently was incorrect. Efforts to land definitely if there were four passengers, and if so, who was the fourth, were hindered by the difficulty of communications with Burry Port and the confusion attendant upon the arrival of the trans-Atlantic plane at that little place.

Message from Plane
The first definite message that the Friendship had succeeded in crossing the Atlantic came this morning from Captain George Fried, commander of the steamship America, who identified the plane by its number.

Captain Fried sent the message to the London office of The Associated Press. The message read:

"Seventy-five miles southeast of Queenstown (Cobh) the seaplane Friendship NX-4204 circled overhead and attempted to drop two notes on board but was not successful. The plane then flew north."

(Signed) "Fried."

Were On Watch
Captain Fried's sighting of the Friendship was not an accident as he was watching for her. The jovial commander, who was the hero of the Antiope rescue of several years ago, is intensely interested in trans-Atlantic flying and had made plans to be on the keenest lookout for the plane.

Before sailing from Southampton yesterday, the Captain plotted the Friendship's probable course and announced confidently that he expected to sight the plane. When Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh crossed the Atlantic, Captain Fried diverted the course of his ship to the north and was on the bridge almost continuously for 24 hours watching for the Spirit of St. Louis. He also arranged special searchlights at night and a heavy smokescreen by day to attract the plane. On this occasion he missed the trans-Atlantic flier by about thirty miles only.

Landed Without Warning
The Friendship, without warning, slipped in over Bristol Channel which is at the mouth of the river Severn and came down in Burry Estuary several miles off Burry Port.

It was 12:40 p. m. just 20 hours and 7 minutes after the Friendship took off from Trepassey, Newfoundland, where she had been held about ten days by unfavorable weather conditions and difficulty in making a takeoff with her great load of gasoline.

The tri-motored ship, the first equipped with pontoons to make the direct crossing, came to rest as the tide was fully out and the pontoons soon drove their noses into the sand close to shore.

A launch was sent out immediately to the plane to determine the wishes of the fliers and render any assistance possible.

Not in years has this tiny port experienced such a thrill as when the big plane swooped into the Estuary carrying the first woman ever to cross the Atlantic by air.

Population Excited
It was doubtful if many people in the little port even knew that the plane was enroute from Newfoundland. However it did not take long for news of the great achievement to spread and the population quivered with excitement at being in on such a feat.

Until about noon it seemed highly probable that the Friendship would land at Southampton, her goal, and that seaport was all set to give the American girl and the plane a great welcome.

The first definite report that the Friendship was on this side of the Atlantic came from the steamship America over which the plane circled twice some 70 miles southeast of Cobh. The plane dropped several notes, but these did not land on the steamer.

With word of the plane's sighting so near Ireland, it was then assured that the great venture would turn out successfully, but the big question remained as to just where she would settle down and touch the goal for victory.

Message to AP
The first version of the report from the America said that the Friendship, after circling over the liner, headed in a southerly direction. This made it appear that she was keeping on to Southampton.

A direct message to The Associated Press from Captain George Fried, however, said that the plane had flown off in a northerly direction and it was not long afterward that the Friendship settled down in Welsh waters.

The Friendship was first sighted at Llanelli, near Swansea, about noon. She was flying low through a mist and was skirting the coast looking for a suitable landing place on the Llanelli foreshore. Then she disappeared toward Burry Port.

A few minutes later she was sighted at Burry Port, circled Burry Inlet for a few moments and then dropped to a landing. She taxied along the river Llwchwr and came to a halt 6000 after, making fast to a buoy.

(Burry Port is a small seaport four miles west of Llanelli. It has a tidal harbor and dock and a copper smelting works.)

Crew Taken Ashore
A motorboat immediately went out and took the plane's passengers ashore in the presence of hundreds of people who ran across the marshy swamp near the scene for a distance of three-quarters of a mile to greet the intrepid aviators.

The region in which the fliers had ended their brilliant flight across the ocean made a depressing scene, but the aviators did not seem to mind and looked well after their long journey.

51 Reported Dead in Columbia Blast
Bogota, Columbia, June 18—(AP)—Reports from Barranquilla say 51 persons are missing and are believed to have perished in the explosion which destroyed the Colombian army gunboat Hercules Saturday on the Magdalena river near the port of Soto Nuevo.

Most of the victims were drowned and their bodies were devoured by alligators, say the reports.

The Hercules had 73 persons aboard at the time of the accident which happened at about midnight, while most of them were asleep. The 22 survivors were blown into the river and either swam ashore or clung to floating timber until rescued by inhabitants of nearby settlements, who, awakened by the blast, put out in canoes and skiffs to save them.

Mexican Flier in New York this Morn
Mitchell Field, N. Y., June 18—(AP)—Captain Emilio Carranza, Mexico's good-will ambassador, landed at 9:50 a. m. today from Washington. In the throng that greeted the Mexican flier at the end of his two-hour and fifty minute jump from the Capital were Arturo M. Elias, Mexican Consul General in New York and members of his staff, General Hanson D. Ely, commander of the second corps area, and Major John N. Reynolds, commanding officer at Mitchell Field.

"Conditions Poor"
Declares Gunwoman
Chicago, June 18—(AP)—"Conditions in Chicago are terrible," said the middle-aged woman in a black coat who entered the candy shop of Mrs. Mary Stuebe early today. "It isn't safe for a person anywhere in this town."

She began fumbling in her handbag and extracted a pistol. She pointed it at Mrs. Stuebe, took all the money out of the cash register, and departed, leaving the storekeeper to ponder on conditions in Chicago.

WAR AGRICULTURE SECRETARY DEAD; RITES WEDNESDAY

The Meredith home Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Despite his illness, Mr. Meredith permitted the use of his name against Gov. Al Smith of New York in the recent Iowa democratic presidential preference primary, which Gov. Smith won. Mr. Meredith always had been known as a "progressive dry."

Besides his political activities, Mr. Meredith was widely known as the publisher of farm papers.

President Wilson named Mr. Meredith to the cabinet in 1920. In the 1924 democratic convention, Mr. Meredith's name remained before the delegates to the end. On the 101 ballot, he received 130 votes, ranking third to John W. Davis and Oscar W. Underwood.

Was "Dirty" Farmer
An inherited love of the soil and general interest in the welfare of farmers lifted Meredith from youthful obscurity to national prominence and a place in Wilson's cabinet.

He started in boyhood as a real "dirty" farmer, the occupation of his father and his grandfather. A high school education and one year at college weaned him away from actual work on the farm, but tended to increase his interest in the lot of those who till the soil.

Mr. Meredith's grandfather, in addition to his agricultural interests, was the publisher of a farm weekly, The Farmers' Tribune. It was devoted to Populism and met with financial difficulties when that movement died out.

Having completed a year in Highland Park College, Des Moines, young Meredith, then 20 years of age, borrowed $1,800 with which he purchased his grandfather's publication. Through six years it brought him much hard work and little success. The Farmers' Tribune was discontinued and in its place Mr. Meredith established Successful Farming as a monthly periodical.

That proved the foundation of the successful Meredith Publications, the name of Mr. Meredith's business, to which eventually were added "Better Homes and Gardens" and "The Dairy Farmer" the three having a combined monthly circulation of more than 2,000,000.

Influence Grew
Through his publications and recognition as a business leader in Des Moines, the growth of Mr. Meredith's influence was a natural sequence, and led him into politics. In 1914 he was the democratic candidate for United States Senator from Iowa and two years later was his party's candidate for governor of the state. He was defeated on both occasions.

In 1917, William G. McAdoo, then Secretary of the Treasury, appointed Mr. Meredith to the Board of Excess Profits Advisers. Two years later President Wilson named him a member of the Industrial Commission.

Alfred E. Smith of New York, the ticket favoring the New York governor, however, was successful in the Iowa primary election.

Edwin Thomas Meredith was born at Avoca, Iowa, December 23, 1876, the son of Thomas Oliver and Minnie Minerva Marsh Meredith. He married Miss Edna C. Elliott of Des Moines in 1896. They had two children.

(From the Arkansas Gazette)
However humble the place I may hold
Or lowly the trails I have trod,
There's a child who bases his faith
On me;
There's a dog who thinks I'm a god.

Lord, keep me worthy—Lord, keep me clean
And fearless and unbeguiled,
Lest I lose caste in the sight of a dog
And the wide, clear eyes of a child.

Lest there shall come in the years to be
The blight of a withering grief,
And a little dog mourn for a fallen god
And a child for his lost belief.

SAYS YOUTH INTERESTED IN CLASSICAL MUSIC

Miami, Fla.—(AP)—Classical music has arisen from its age to strike a few blows in its own behalf and today is a strong rival in popularity, especially among the younger generation, believes Mrs. LeRoy Smith, a member of the advisory committee of the National Federation of Music Clubs.

The musical standard of our nation is higher than ever before," she says. "The trend of young people is toward classics rather than jazz. This change is not the result of condemning jazz, but rather the placing of good music in schools, clubs, theaters and homes until musical appreciation has been developed to such a degree that the desire is for the classics.

"Our younger generation has learned to recognize compositions on hearing them, to name the composers and give their nationalities. Give us opera in English, as advocated by the national federation, and our standing as a musical leader among nations is assured."

Short Interviews With Famous Women

There should be more idealism and beauty taught in sex education, according to "Mother" Stoner, Dr. Winifred Sackville Stoner, noted feminist and mother of the prodigy Winifred Stoner, 2nd.

"If parents could teach their children almost from the cradle to glorify the function of sex, it would eliminate the distressing sordidness that darkens the lives of so many millions," Mrs. Stoner contended.

"Instead of letting children think father and mother have their love on the sly, children should be told the whole truth of life and the beauty of the creative instinct.

"Children should be taught how important health and the care of their growing bodies is. Their whole attitude towards life would be cleaner and sweeter. Life today has all too little idealism in it.

"Early marriages, I think, make for saner, more moral lives. And I am convinced if children were taught to regard sex in the right way, there would be better morals, more early marriages and greater happiness."

Lenox-Krause Wedding This Morn

This morning at 9 o'clock at the parsonage of the St. Paul Lutheran church, the pastor, Rev. L. W. Walter, officiated at the ceremony which united in marriage, Donald F. Lenox of Palmyra township, and Miss Olive Krause, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. Krause who reside near Nachusa, and who were witnesses of their daughter's wedding this morning. Attending the bride and bridegroom, also were Miss Lila Krause, sister of the bride, and Lloyd Ollig.

The bride was beautifully attired in tan taffeta with hat harmonizing, and the bridesmaid wore blue taffeta, and both carried bouquets of roses and sweet peas.

The bridal party enjoyed a wedding breakfast and the happy couple left on a brief wedding trip. On their return they will make their home in Sterling, the bridegroom being employed by the International Harvester Co. of Rock Falls. Both Mr. and Mrs. Lenox have many friends who wish them every happiness.

Bridge Made E-sy

INITIAL NO TRUMP BIDS

Players often are told to follow certain rules without question. At first these may be followed regardless of whether or not you know the reasons, but, as you progress, you should become familiar with the why and wherefore. For every rule, for every principle enunciated, there must be some mathematical reason. It must be based on the law of average probabilities; if not, it is not a sound rule.

When you are told you must bid or play a certain way, always demand the logic underlying it. In this manner you will develop sound bridge reasoning that will be of aid to you at every turn. Let guides assist you during the formative period, but let your constant aim be to develop reason rather than rote. However, regardless of how undesirable the use of guides may be, they are, nevertheless, a thousand-fold more reliable than "hunches" ever can be.

The aim of the player should be to develop a bridge instinct—to know the right thing to do at the right time. Until you develop this power, use the guides that have been suggested, generally approved and found sound in actual play.

As an illustration, the player is always told, "Do not bid a no trump unless three suits are stopped," and "Do not bid a no trump if the hand contains a singleton." Let us examine into the whys and wherefores of these rules.

In a no trump the highest cards take the tricks. If the declarer holds: Spades A K Q J Hearts A K Q Diamonds A K Q Clubs A K Q the declarer must take every trick, if the game be played at no trump. The probabilities of holding such a hand are extremely remote. If the declarer holds:

Spades A K Q J 10 9 8 7 6 5 Hearts A Diamonds A Clubs A the declarer must also take every trick at no trump. If the declarer holds:

Spades A K Q J 10 9 8 7 6 5 Hearts A Diamonds A Clubs None

the probabilities are at least two to one against him that the opponents control the club suit and they may make all the club tricks before he can make a trick in the other suits.

It therefore follows that you should never bid a no trump if you are blank of a suit, because the probabilities are against you. If you hold a singleton of less value than the A in one of the suits the probabilities are against you. Even if you hold two cards (called a doubleton) of less value than Q X, and your opponents hold the remaining high cards, the probabilities are that they will make their tricks in your worthless suit before you can establish one of your strong suits.

BODY OF FEDERAL JUDGE CLIFFE AT REST IN FR. GROVE

Funeral at Sycamore on Friday Afternoon Drew Throngs

Sycamore—With the interior of the palatial residence of the late Hon. Adam C. Cliffe, transformed into a veritable greenhouse, the large lawn representing a gathering of many of the state's most distinguished citizens and professional men, the last services for the former judge of the federal court, Chicago, were held Friday afternoon.

The home was not adequate in which to place the innumerable floral offerings, and many were placed on the porch. The members of the grievous family occupied rooms on the second floor of the home, while the honorary pallbearers and intimate friends of the family were seated in the house and on the porch. The huge lawn extending nearly a half block was virtually filled with friends of the deceased judge, several driving many miles to pay their last respects to a man who was considered one of the leaders of the state, not only in court circles, but in the political world as well.

Rev. Theodore Branch of the St. Peter's Episcopal church conducted the services at the home, beginning at 2 o'clock. Following Rev. Branch, Judge Samuel A. Schuler of the United States Court of Appeals, took his place at the entrance to the home, delivering a eulogy that was highly praised. The work of the late judge, Judge A. Schuler's address was delivered not only for the benefit of the members of the Cliffe family, but for the bar association, state and county, and other representatives in attendance. Those men who were unable to get into the home, stood silently on the lawn until the Chicago judge had completed his address.

Many Floral Tributes

Six automobiles of the larger type were necessary to transport the many floral sets, pieces and sprays to the grave. Some of the special pieces, sent by friends in Chicago, were said to be the most beautiful that had ever been seen in the county seat.

Seven motorcycle officers, employed as state highway police were in charge of the cortege as it left Sycamore and proceeded to the Franklin Grove cemetery. Sergeant Kemper met the procession near Creston while state men under his jurisdiction working Friday included O. N. Larson and L. L. Elmendorf of DeKalb; Harold Lenox, Hal Roberts, Kenneth Church, of Dixon and Fred Nelson of Marengo. Through the courtesy of the state police the funeral procession estimated by many to be more than three miles long, reached the Franklin Grove cemetery without interruption.

At the cemetery the Masonic burial rites were exemplified in a manner that made many a strong man stand in beside that open grave realize the uncertainties of life.

Without question, those attending the service at Sycamore Friday and accompanying the family to the cemetery comprised the greatest gathering of distinguished men and women of the state ever together in this county.

"THE DAILY SQUAWK"

This afternoon there was a near approach to a catastrophe in archery. An inquisitive steer came up to investigate a target that had appeared on the stage since last he had been there. Cattle, always curious to a point of saturation, insist on being informed on current news items. Accordingly, this adventuresome young fellow dribbled around the field, finally wandering up to the target. Targets, in the best regulated society, are composed of hay. It is traditional that cattle are hay burners. This steer was no exception. He was all set to close his jaws down on an especially tempting morsel. Coises, he was fooled just in the nick of time, and was forced to hunt for greener pastures.

Harry Herbst has fallen hard. However, she has fallen harder. She came out to see him last night, we could not quite determine whether of her own accord, or whether at his urgent request. Anyway suffice it to say she came out. She was twine! No, not real twine, you understand, but we mean two girls were on deck. We can't figure out just how Harry could accommodate both at the same identical moment, but it appears that all were satisfied. However, there is one point left for meditation—"Just why did Harry send them home so soon?"

There was a new arrival in half camp zoo today. It was about half groundhog when it first came in, but by now it is a real, scrappy fellow. You know the desperate beast had to be put to sleep in order to catch him, so of course at first he was only half there. He's fully awake now, though, and if it weren't for the retaining bars of his cage, he'd surely make hash out of the first bit of scenery he laid eyes on, whether it be boy scenery or not.

THE LEGACY OF LOVE.

A. H. Woodward, Birmingham capitalist, rated one of the wealthiest men in the south, has just received a priceless legacy from his mother.

Woodward has reached the point where he doesn't need any more money. But this legacy wasn't money; it wasn't anything that money could ever buy.

His mother's will was read recently, after her death. In it was the following paragraph:

"I wish my son, A. H. Woodward, to know that he has never given me cause for unhappiness or worry during his life, and it is my desire that he remember me as giving to him a perfect love."

That is the priceless legacy the rich Mr. Woodward received. It is worth far more than any monetary bequest could possibly be worth; it would be so even if the recipient had not a dime to his name.

Money, when the real, fundamental things of life are concerned, is not a commodity of very great value, after all. It will buy food, clothing, houses, automobiles and such like, and they are very fine; yet a man cannot live by them alone. The thing that sets a man above the beasts makes life worth living and convinces him of his immortality has nothing to do with money. It has to do, rather, with the giving of service and devotion and the receiving of love in return.

And, as a man grows older, there is the matter of memory. All that he has done is the material out of which his memory weaves a background. If this background has a texture that will bear close inspection, the man need not worry about his declining days; they will be happy. If it happens to be otherwise, his money will be able to do much to pad his last years.

It is in these fundamentals that Mr. Woodward has been made rich beyond most men. How many men can look back into the past and see a record such as his: "he has never given me for unhappiness or worry during his life"? How many men would not give every cent they own to be able to do it?

And then there is that other line: "it is my desire that he remember me as giving to him a perfect love." The man who has the memory of such devotion is not in need of much else.

Truly, it was a splendid legacy that Mr. Woodward received. To a real man it is more valuable than any collection of stocks and bonds you can imagine. Stocks and bonds you can use for a while, but when you die you cannot take them with you. But love—or so we believe and trust—can be taken on, beyond the grave, and kept forever.

Good news from Hollywood, folks. Fifty thousand are said to be unemployed. At least they are not making pictures in which the cub reporter is Sherlock Holmes, in which the villain reforms and marries the district attorney's daughter or in which the farm boy goes to the city and spoils the life of the slickers.

THE ANIMATES

STORY &amp; IAL COCHRAN—PICTURES &amp; KNICK

The Times found its little home was quite a funny place to roam. The windows were like peck-holes and the rooms were very small. They found few tables and some chairs, and then a bowl filled high with pears. "Just help yourselves", one midget said. "You lads can have them all."

They all sat down and had some fun, and when the meal of pears was done, one little girl said, "Now let's go outside and get some air. We have some little things to do, and we will let you help us, too." They ran outside and found the tall, slim dairyman still there.

"Well, well, hello there", shouted he. "Quite happy you all seem to be. Why don't you go down to the barn and see the midget hens. It isn't such a lengthy hike, and you'll find things that you will like. Be sure and see the tiny pigs all cooped up in a pen."

So, 'cross the yard the Times flew

BY RUTH DEWEY GROVES

Dear Marye:

By this time nearly everyone in town has seen your photograph in the paper, and they're quite thrilled over it. They all say you have become much smarter and more stylish since you are living in the city, and that you wear your clothes with an air.

I have taken no issue, but I maintain that you always did look well, even when you lived in a little town, and wore home-made clothes.

What pleased me most about it was the fact that Alan was so proud of you, and that he really approved of your stunt and thought you were helping him.

It doesn't necessarily imply, my dear, that a man is a social climber just because he likes to have his wife identified with the best and most established people in a community.

You see, a man has to make a place for himself in the business world, and he has to make it a solid and substantial thing. And running the risk of being called old-fashioned, I will say that I think a woman has an obligation to establish herself socially in the same way.

You may not want to be a society queen, and I hope you don't, but at the same time, you want to be welcomed in the best society. Social climbing is disgusting, and I should hate to feel that you had any of the traits of a climber, but since you must have affiliations and friends, it seems to me wise to make them among people that your husband respects and approves of.

The difference between the Bohemian society, which seemed to attract you so strongly at first, and the more established order is largely the difference between stability and a constantly changing circle.

An artist or an eccentric person may be the vogue one year, and the next he is forgotten while another idol is worshipped. The satellites change with the orbits around which they revolve.

You probably will accuse me now of lecturing you, but I have not meant to do so. First and foremost, I always want you to be happy and if I thought you and Alan were natural "Bohemians" I never should and then, the first thing that they knew they stood before a tiny barn. A rooster crowed aloud. "Oh, look at him," one Tiny said, "his tail is green, his neck all red. He really is a pretty bird. No wonder he feels proud."

"Let's gather eggs", wee Clowney cried. "I bet I'll find some right inside the little barn. You all wait here till I come out again." So right into the barn he went. About a half an hour was spent in hunting eggs. The Clowney found a very fussy hen.

She cackled loud and jumped in air and gave poor Clowney quite a scare. He ran outside and tried to hold 'bout ten eggs safe and sound. Right after him, the mad hen flew. The next thing that poor Clowney knew, he'd dropped all of the eggs, and they were spilling on the ground.

Campaigns of Former Years

1900

By Associated Press Leased Wire
The Republican national convention of 1900 met in Philadelphia June 19-21, and renominated William McKinley for president on a platform standing for "a protective tariff" and "sound money." Theodore Roosevelt, who had been governor of New York, assistant secretary of the navy, and a Spanish-American war hero in Cuba, was chosen as the vice presidential nominee.

The Democrats, meeting in Kansas City, July 4-6, again made William Jennings Bryan the standard bearer of his party and picked Adlai E. Stevenson for vice president.

Bryan made "imperialism" his paramount issue, the United States having acquired the Philippines and islands in the West Indies in the war with Spain. He devoted attention, too, to the trusts, which were springing up with power and influence. In all his campaigns he toured the country, drawing great crowds. McKinley conducted a front porch campaign at his Canton, O., home, but Roosevelt made a speaking tour of the country and vied with Bryan as a popular orator. McKinley and Roosevelt were elected.

Telephone Service in Italy

American tourists who visited Italy shortly after the war were unanimous in the opinion that the telephone service there was one of the worst in the world. But reports from recent visitors indicate that conditions in Italy are vastly different now. A few years ago the telephone system, which up to that time had been a government monopoly, was ceded to private enterprise, and now Italians boast that they have one of the best systems in the world. The telephone plant has been modernized, the lines greatly extended, the number of telephones increased and the service made more rapid and efficient.

Illinois C. C. Good
Will Flight Coming

Chicago, June 18.—(AP)—Twenty-five silver-winged airplanes will roar out of one of Chicago's airports in the early hours of the morning Wednesday on the inaugural flight of an air tour of the state.

Through nearly a score of Illinois cities, the messengers of aviation progress will fly for four days, carrying more than seventy passengers who will seek to stimulate greater interest in the development of aviation in Illinois.

Sponsored by the aeronautical division of the Illinois Chamber of Commerce, the flight will attempt directly to create better landing fields, more adequate airports and marking of airways. Joining in the air crusade are a score of Illinois airplane and business organizations which are equipping the flight.

On the first day of the tour, the planes will stop at Rockford, Sterling, Moline, Monmouth and Galesburg; the second day itinerary will be Peoria, Bloomington, Decatur and Springfield; the third day will bring the planes to East St. Louis, Belleville, Carbondale and Marion, with the ships halting at Champaign and Kankakee on the return trip to Chicago, June 23.

Welcoming committees and business men will greet the fliers at each airport, the Illinois chamber has been informed, and at each point addresses will be made concerning the development of aviation.

Among the speakers on the tour will be John H. Camlin, president of the Illinois Chamber of Commerce; W. P. MacCracken, assistant secretary of commerce for aeronautics; M. C. Meigs, publisher of the Chicago Herald and Examiner, and chairman of the aeronautics division of the Illinois chamber; Dr. A. R. Ferguson, governor of the Illinois chapter of the National Aeronautic association; C. G. Ferris, general secretary of the Illinois chamber; G. E. Stephens, editor of the Illinois Journal of Commerce; Col. P. G. ## DEMS' KEYNOTER NEW FIGURE FOR PARTY POLITICS

Bowers Won Fame in His
Jackson Day Address: Writer

New York—You can take a true Hoosier far from his native state, bury him in the anonymity of newspaper editorial writing and turn him into a scholarly, retiring historian; but sooner or later he will turn back to the only pursuit a real Hoosier ever enjoys—politics.

That's what happened in the case of Claude G. Bowers, anyway. Bowers, born and bred in Indiana, moved to New York five years ago to become an editorial writer for the New York Evening World. In his spare time he studied and wrote history. But last winter he plopped back into politics so zestfully that he was at once chosen to deliver the keynote speech at the coming Democratic convention in Houston, Tex.

It all happened because Bowers was invited to address last January's Jackson Day dinner in Washington. This is a traditional love feast of the Democrats, marked in recent years by a notable absence of Bowers. He had written absorbing biographies of such Democratic heroes as Andrew Jackson and Thomas Jefferson, and through some happy inspiration the committee asked him to speak.

Electrified Party. He urged his hearers to make Jackson and Jefferson something more than mere patron saints of their eras with conditions today and, before he had finished, aroused the Democratic chiefs to real enthusiasm. A man who could do that seemed worth keeping; so Bowers, by general consent, was chosen to do the keynoting at Houston.

To most of the country, thus far, he has been just a name. When his election as keynoter was announced, the rank and file of the Democracy murmured, "And who the dickens is he?" After he delivered his speech at Houston, however, it is a safe bet that he will be a national figure.

Bowers was born in Hamilton county, Indiana, in November of 1878. As a young man he entered newspaper work, serving his apprenticeship on the old Indianapolis Sentinel. This, it might be noted, was while he was still in high school; and before his graduation he had given promise of his future ability as a speaker by winning a state medal for oratory.

Defeated for Congress. On his graduation from high school he went to Terre Haute and became a reporter for the Star. There he exercised the Hoosier's privilege of becoming active in politics, an old record he ran for Congress under the approval of John E. Lamb, then a Democratic power in Indiana. Bowers was defeated, but he continued his political work, holding a variety of minor jobs until 1911.

In that year John Worth Kern became U. S. senator from Indiana, and he took Bowers to Washington with him as his secretary. Bowers got a close-up view of national politics and politicians; also, in his spare time during recesses, he got acquainted with the Congressional Library beginning the research that later was to bear fruit in his histories.

In 1917 he returned to Indiana to become editor of the Fort Wayne Journal-Gazette. He held that post until 1923, and waged many a political battle with the opposition paper, the News-Sentinel. The Journal-Gazette, of course, was a Democratic paper, and Bowers attracted considerable reputation by his party services.

So, in 1923, the New York Evening World took him as editorial writer. Bowers went to New York far removed from Hoosier politics; and while his position required him to become familiar with New York politics and to express his opinions thereon, it might have seemed to his friends that he had left active political life.

Fame as Author. This impression probably was strengthened when he began to attain fame as an author. In 1916, while browsing through the Congressional Library, he had gathered the data for his first book, "Irish Orators." Two years later he had written a biography of Senator Kern. In New York his talent really came to flower in two books that gained large circulation. The first was "Party Battles of the Jackson Period," the second, "Jefferson and Hamilton—the Struggle for Democracy in America."

Democratic leaders in New York knew him as an exceptionally able, clear-thinking speaker, and it was their influence that made him Jackson Day speaker last winter. His speech there, delivered with the fire of a polished orator, made his selection as keynoter at Houston practically a foregone conclusion.

His speech in Houston will be heard by millions all over the United States, by means of the radio.

ADVICE TO CORRESPONDENTS

During the many years that I have been writing for publication, it has always been my object to make my newspaper service as valuable as possible to my readers, and I am always willing to answer questions by mail, so that I may give information in the individual cases that are troubling my readers. As a result, my correspondence reaches an average of 20,000 to 30,000 letters each month. You can see that the letters written to me should be as short as possible in fairness to one another.

Today I received three letters which required about forty minutes each for reading, and these letters could probably have been condensed into four or five lines, which would have saved my time materially.

Those of you who correspond with me may wonder how I can answer so many thousands of letters. The simple fact is that I have systematized the work so that no time is lost. I have a staff of several licensed doctors, five secretaries, together with stenographers, mail clerks, and file clerks employed constantly under my personal supervision. All of these people have been especially trained for their work.

Because of the different problems that confront most health seekers, I require much more information than can be given in a short letter. I have prepared thousands of special articles upon subjects relating to the cause and cure of different diseases, so when you write to me, in addition to my necessarily short reply, I enclose thousands of words of advice on the subject upon which you are vitally interested. These special articles have been written in advance to your letter in a very few days. You can help me a great deal and also yourself and the cause of health education in which I am interested, if you will make your letters short and to the point, trying to keep them to one or two hundred words.

My greatest problem is that many of the correspondents insist upon asking me to diagnose their disorders, which of course cannot be done by correspondence. This work is in the field of your family physician. I can give you a proper diagnosis, and know the name of the disorder from which you are suffering. I am always willing to send you my opinion about the method of treatment that I believe would be best, but I will not criticize the opinions of other doctors nor attack any method of treatment which I am not advocating. I am too busy giving you useful advice to use space in this column or in my correspondence of other methods.

On some days the mails to my office are very crowded and letters must necessarily await their turn, so that it may take a little longer for you to receive your reply than I would like. It is not necessary for you to send two or three letters to follow the first if you do not receive an answer as soon as you expect. I cannot answer every letter in this column, and if you desire a reply you must send your name and a large stamped envelope with your return address.

I am attempting to give practical information in a simple manner so that it will be understood by any one, and I am happy in the knowledge that these messages are read daily by several million people on the North American continent. My newspaper service has grown rapidly within the last few years, and I believe that today it is the largest of its kind in the world. This column is written with the one object in view of giving people a better understanding of how to preserve their health and to have health more abundantly.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

QUESTION: Mary W. writes: "I have black lines running before my eyes, especially upon going out into the light. It is making me very nervous, since there is no let-up to them. Would an average of three cups of coffee a day cause this?"

ANSWER: The black lines are probably caused by some form of liver trouble which of course might be made worse by drinking so much coffee. Have a good diagnosis made by a physician and also by an optometrist. When you are sure of the cause of your trouble, the cures lie in simply removing that cause, whatever it may be.

QUESTION: Mrs. O. H. G. asks: "Why do I have such a time trying to make raspberry jelly jelly, when I have no trouble with apples or quinces?"

ANSWER: Your trouble comes from the fact that raspberries contain practically no pectin which is necessary before cooked fruits will thicken or jelly. There is a generous supply of this substance in such fruits as apples, quinces, currants, gooseberries and guavas, hence their jellifying qualities.

QUESTION: Miss W. G. writes: "I wonder if you would give in your health column your opinion of cigarette smoking?"

ANSWER: Moderate cigarette smoking is not necessarily harmful, provided you do not inhale the smoke. It is now not believed that nicotine is taken into the system through smoking, but is burned and destroyed by the fire. However, if you inhale any tar-like substance it is deposited in the lungs, and this is decidedly harmful.

Illinois Briefs

Springfield — Proposed readjustment of the highway bridges and streets crossing Farm creek, at East Peoria, to cost the department of public works and buildings, $75,000, has the legal sanction of Attorney General Oscar E. Carlstrom.

His opinion made public today, was in answer to five questions submitted by the department of public works regarding the relocation of state bond issue routes in the vicinity, and the sharing of the construction cost of approaches to the new Peoria bridge.

Unprecedented rain fall in May, 1927, that caused Farm Creek to flood and over run its banks made necessary the proposed changes.

The department, in its letter to Carlstrom pointed out that this condition was aggravated by the existence of a number of railroad and highway bridges over Farm Creek, in East Peoria, against which debris lodged and obstructed the flow of flood waters, causing the area to become inundated.

In order to prevent a recurrence, the railroads, division of highways, and the state department of public works agreed to raise their bridges and to dredge the channel of Farm Creek.

It was found necessary to modify three state highway bridges to give a proper waterway for Farm Creek after it has been widened and deepened. They are the Washington street bridge, a part of state route 24 and 9, and the East Washington street bridge.

The city of Peoria, having already voted bonds for the construction of a proposed new bridge over the Illinois river asked that the state pay the cost of the approaches to the bridge, which will amount to approximately $300,000, the department said.

The first question asked by the department was whether there were any legal objections to designating locations for several state bond issue roads in that vicinity. To this query, Carlstrom replied in the negative.

The second, third and fourth queries related to the proposed changes and readjustments of the three bridges. To all these, Carlstrom found no legal objections.

Carlstrom replied affirmatively, saying that since route 121 crosses the Illinois river at that point, the department had the power and authority to share the expenses of the proposed Peoria bridge.

The department also asked whether Peoria or any other political subdivision, which voluntarily takes care of the entire cost of the proposed bridge, other than that paid for by the state could ask a refund.

The attorney general said that under the present road and bridge law, a state bridge cannot be constructed in cities of more than 7,500 population, and therefore, neither the city of Peoria nor any other political subdivision would be entitled to any refunds on construction prospects.

Soldiers and sailors, who have already received compensation for personal injuries, may not hold the state liable for further consideration, Attorney General Oscar E. Carlstrom ruled.

His opinion was given to Carlos E. Black, adjutant general of Illinois. The question was whether a former soldier, who had already received compensation could force the state to pay additional damages after he had left the service.

Chicago—Sculptors of the middle west have been asked to submit designs for a memorial group to be built on the proposed Navy Pier at the foot of Randolph Street, Chicago. A corporation for construction of the pier was recently licensed by the secretary of state. A memorial hall and community center for navy officers is part of the scheme, which has the financial backing, in part, of the state.

Macomb—Coach Ray Hansen will be without the services of two quarter-backs, two tackles and one guard when he begins to mold the 1928 Western Illinois State Teachers grid machine next fall.

They are: Harry Newburn and Amond Swartzbough, quarterbacks; Ralph Sullivan and Clifford Yard, tackles; and Wilbur Reynolds, guard, lost to the Leathernecks through graduation this spring.

Newburn, Sullivan and Swartzbough will also be missed during the next basketball season. In baseball, Hansen will do without the services of Captain Walter Tyler and Amond Swartzbough while Glenn Edwards will be missing from the ranks of the thin-clads.

Despite the loss Coach Hansen has a flock of green material he hopes to whip in shape for the opening football clash of the season, in addition to the large staff of regulars left over from last season. Durr, stellar half-back last year, is expected to return.

The western institution finished sixth in the Little Nineteen football race last season, one notch below St. Viator, with a standing of five games won, two lost and a percentage of .715.

Chicago—On a landmark of Chicago, made historic by Jenny Lind, famous Swedish soprano, the St. Andrews church, first Swedish Episcopal edifice in America, is to erect a new temple, with memories of its fair benefactor contained in treasured gifts. The new church will not replace the original building that first became known as "Jenny Lind's church," for the devastating Chicago fire of 1871 accomplished that. It will, however, rise on the old church's landmark, supplanting the present edifice, which was erected soon after the Chicago fire.

In the new church to cost $67,000, will be found the memorable communion vessels, given to the church nearly 80 years ago by the famous singer. It was to this first church that she also gave $1,500 toward its construction cost more than three-quarters of a century ago.

Small, but designed with a view to artistic beauty, the new edifice will be a fitting replacement of the old memorial, its leaders believe. Rev. William Tulberg of Chicago is the pastor.

The church was organized in 1859 in the basement of old St. James church by the Rev. Gustaf Unonius. In 1891 its first parish building was completed, with Jenny Lind a member. For nearly 15 years after the Chicago fire, the church struggled ahead under the leadership of Rev. Herman Lindskog, and upon his death, it disintegrated and lost its property. In 1924, it was reorganized by the Rev. Wilhelm Blomquist, and this year the parish voted to erect a memorial church to Jenny Lind.

Charleston—Residents of Charleston have discovered that the louder they shout the more action they will get.

For years they have been protesting a deficient water supply, but they have the same water supply.

A week ago they set up a clamor when local interference antagonized their radio ears, and malodorous trash puckered sensitive noses. Now they have neither, the general conclusion being that the more vociferous the protest, the quicker the action.

But a few days ago, radio receivers began emitting strange howls and squeals. Several public-minded fans obtained detector sets, with the result that a street railway company, a telegraph company and a telephone exchange were jointly accused of spoiling the operation of radios. Within a short time, the conditions were corrected.

Residents in another section of the city one morning informed the city government that accumulations of trash were becoming so general that odors were no longer tolerable. The protest flowed in, with the result that the city fathers threatened to arrest anyone who failed to clear his property of trash.

Now, Charleston is at peace with radios performing flawlessly and trash in the dump-heap, but they still have their poor water supply, the inference being they haven't "hollered" loud enough.

Springfield—Twenty years of service, good standing for fifty years of age are the three requisites Illinois firemen seeking pensions must meet, Attorney General Oscar E. Carlstrom said.

The question of conditions necessary to the granting of a pension arose when A. V. Smith, state's attorney of Lake county, consulted the attorney general. Carlstrom ruled that applicants must have served at least 20 years, the last five of which must have been continuous; that they must be fifty years of age, and that they must have remained in good standing by paying to the treasurer of the state firemen's board, all of their monthly contributions.

Peoria—A four-day harness racing program has been planned in connection with the Greater Peoria exposition here, September 11-14. The fair has been given membership in the Central Illinois Trotting and Pacing association.

Dr. J. C. Murchison, Galesburg, has been announced as superintendent of speed. W. D. Lester, Kewanee, will be the starting judge.

Two races will be staged each day, the contest being decided on the basis of three heats out of five.

Heart Strain; Its Consequence

By Morris H. Kahn, M. D., New York City.

(The following is one of a series of articles prepared under the direction of the Gorgas Memorial as part of its Better Health and Longer Life program. President Coolidge is the honorary president of the Memorial, which has been organized and endowed by prominent doctors and laymen throughout the country to perpetuate the work of the late Major-General Gorgas in preventing unnecessary illness. Headquarters of the Gorgas Memorial are at 400 North Michigan Avenue, Chicago.)

As long as human effort is utilized to drag, lift, pull or push weights that should be relegated to mechanical apparatus, there will be disastrous effects upon the human organism in consequence of strain. It will take its human toll inevitably until it becomes recognized that the power of muscles in the human machine must not be stressed to the extreme. There is an exacting compulsion of labor in some departments of industry with regard to the conservation of the energy of the individual. Thus foremen, riveters, hodmen, stone masons, sailors, soldiers, longshoremen, blacksmiths, porters, metal workers, and miners are still compelled to exert great and often sudden and violent effort while at work.

Heart strain may be fully explained as the outcome of extreme prolonged exertion. It is the effect of stress or reiteration stresses upon the heart muscle, with resulting stretching of the fibers beyond their elastic limits. It will come on earlier when there has been some pre-existing abnormal condition, such as increased blood pressure, or when the heart is not mature—as in young adolescents who do too vigorous exercise.

Although the machinery of the circulation allows for a rather wide field of responsiveness to effort, there are definite limits beyond which any attempt on the part of the heart to enlarge blood vessels to maintain adequate circulation is injurious. The normal heart naturally adapts itself to those stresses which, in various degrees, we all have to encounter, but must be able to recognize the signals of any overstepping the limits of the heart's responsiveness.

A person properly trained in the laborious maneuvers of his occupation and the postural leverage to be used need not fear heart strain as much as one unaccustomed to the labor. In some circumstances, a single act of violent exertion may be followed by prolonged or even permanent inability to take exercise, but also by actual enlargement of the heart and disease of the heart muscle.

For years a man may pursue a laborious occupation without any apparent ill effects, but on one particular occasion, such as lifting a heavy weight in an uncomfortable or unusual posture, acute heart strain may develop. Thus, Antonio C. was for years a laborer doing strenuous work. One day, while exerting the utmost effort to life a heavy stone onto a wheelbarrow, he suddenly felt as if something were tearing below the region of the heart. The pain was sharp and knife-like in character, situated in the region of the heart. During the two years that followed the injury to the heart he was almost totally disabled from work.

Heart strain of whatever degree must not be dismissed lightly because it is a long enduring condition. In general, improvement does not take place sufficiently to enable a man to resume a laborious occupation. The healing processes in such a mobile organ as the heart are very slow. The symptoms persist for an indefinite period, and with strenuous exertion may be aggravated. Treatment can be summed up in the one phrase, "Prolonged rest." The return from complete rest to full activity must be made very gradually.

THIS WEEK WILL BE BUSY FOR MR. HERBERT HOOVER

Many Decisions About Campaign Plans to be Determined

Washington, June 17—(AP)—Refreshed by the rest of the Sabbath, Herbert Hoover today entered upon a week anticipated as replete with political activity. By Saturday night it is expected that he will reach decisions on numerous points of importance in connection with his campaign as Republican nominee for the Presidency.

But these decisions are not to be made entirely on Mr. Hoover's own initiative. He plans to confer with numerous leaders of his party.

In addition, Mr. Hoover on Thursday will meet a group of 24 representatives of the Republican National Committee, who will expect him to indicate his choice for the chairmanship of the committee. Mr. Hoover, too, is to lay before the committee his campaign plans as evolved by that time.

James W. Good, who managed the Commerce Secretary's pre-convention campaign, occupied a prominent place on today's schedule of callers. Good has been a predominant figure among Mr. Hoover's political forces and has been mentioned as his probable choice for the chairmanship of the National Committee.

In addition to this point, Mr. Hoover today faced the necessity of early decisions as to when he will resign from his position in the Cabinet a visit to President Coolidge at the summer White House in Wisconsin, the receipt of official notification of his nomination and various details of his campaign organization.

Mr. Hoover spent the Sabbath in rest and relaxation. With his entire family he attended services at a Quaker meeting house in downtown Washington.

REALLY A GOOD ONE
From GOOD to GIRL in four strokes makes a neat little letter golf puzzle. You'll find one solution on page 7.

G	O	O	D
G	I	R	L

THE RULES
1—The idea of letter golf is to change one word to another and do it in four, a given number of strokes. Thus to change COW to HEN, in three strokes, COW, HOW, HEW, HEN.
2—You can change only one letter at a time.
3—You must have a complete word of common usage, for each pump. Slang words and abbreviations don't count.
4—The order of letters cannot be changed.
One solution is printed on page 7.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES
"IS THE UNIVERSE, INCLUDING MAN, EVOLVED BY ATOMIC FORCE?" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, Sunday, June 17.

The Golden Text was from Psalms 95:6, 7, "O come, let us worship and bow down; let us kneel before the Lord our maker. For he is our God; and we are the people of his pasture, and the sheep of his hand."

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God. All things were made by him; and without him was not anything made that was made" (John 1:1, 3).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "God creates and governs the universe, including man. The universe is filled with spiritual ideas, which He evolves, and they are obedient to the Mind that makes them" (p. 256).

WHEN A GIRL LOVES

THIS HAS HAPPENED
VIRGINIA BREWSTER is in love with an artist, NATHAN-IEL DANN, but she is tricked into promising to marry FRED-ERICK DEAN in one year if he alleges her father cheated him out of.

BREWSTER had lost his fortune in speculation before his death and VIRGINIA is left destitute. She pawns some of her jewelry and OLIVER CUTLER promises to invest the money for her.

She seeks work, but without success. She discovers that she is being shadowed and suspects that DEAN has bribed the agencies not to help her. After word gets out that the "Brewster girl" is job-seeking, she is besieged by reporters.

CUTLER gains the confidence of VIRGINIA and shows her attentions which NIEL resents, but she does not like the idea of fidelity with which his model,
CHRIS MOND, treats him.

HE sends VIRGINIA an evening wrap which she returns, telling him how contemptible she thinks his spying tactics are. His reply is to ruin CUTLER's friendship with VIRGINIA and she warns OL-IVER. Then she is lucky enough to get a position with a woman-able company which she likes.

The summer passes and in early September VIRGINIA is engaged when charged by CUTLER's wife with trying to alienate his affections. Frankly, she appeals to OLIVER to explain and tells him she considers it best to withdraw her account from him.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
CHAPTER XXXVI
VIRGINIA was at Oliver's office the next morning before he arrived. She had experienced a night of terrible suspense, wondering how much money he actually had made for her and what had happened to the oil stock he mentioned. She prayed that the losses sustained had not been severe. It would be tragic to endure a setback, especially at this time when she was facing the necessity of finishing what she had started out to accomplish, without his assistance. For she must take her account elsewhere, she knew. There was no hope of concealing anything in her life from Frederick Dean, apparently.

And then there was Jeanie with her ready acceptance of the basest construction that could be

Watching the Big Scoreboard

BY HERBERT W. BARKER
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

A wide open space is beginning to show between the high-flying St. Louis Cardinals and the rest of the National League pack.

The Cards carried their winning streak to eight straight games at the expense of the faltering Cincinnati Reds at Redland yesterday, rain halted play in the sixth inning with the Cardinals leading, 6 to 2, chiefly on account of Jackie May's wildness.

Today the Cardinals were leading the field by three games with most of their advantage contained in the last column.

The New York Giants allowed a golden opportunity to gain on the second-place Reds go glimmering when they bowed before the moist delivery of Burleigh Grimes. Burleigh, traded to the Pirates by the Giants during the winter, gave his former teammates only five hits and won, 6 to 0. Paul Waner's single scored the first two Corsair runs in the first inning. The other four rode home in the fourth when Charley Hargreaves lifted the ball into the stands with the bases filled.

Daddy Vance turned in a hurling masterpiece as Brooklyn turned back the Cubs, 4 to 0. He struck out 15 men and gave up only three hits. Stephenson alone of the Cubs failed to return to the bench after watching three go by. Beck was set down on strikes three times. The Dodgers hit Charley Root and Phil Weinert hard.

Babe Ruth and Lou Gehrig put on their famous act to the dismay of St. Louis fans and the Yankees pounded out an easy 6 to 2 victory over the Browns. Babe smashed his 25th homer of the season with one on base in the seventh. Gehrig waited until the ninth to get No. 16 also with one man on base.

Sad Sam Jones allowed three hits as Washington shut out Detroit, 12 to 0, the Senators' third victory of the four-game series. In the first four innings the Senators pounded out 11 hits and scored as many runs.

The Philadelphia Athletics held fast to their position eighth and a half games back of the Yankees with a bitterly-fought 8 to 7 verdict over the Indians at Cleveland. It was a heart-breaking defeat, for the Indians who rallied for five runs in the eighth, within one of the tying mark, and then filled the bases with none out in the ninth but could not score.

Rain washed out the Boston-Chicago game.

Columbia Favorite in Tuesday Regatta

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., June 18.—(AP)—They are picking the boys from little old New York to repeat on their own waters of the Hudson river in the big race of the Poughkeepsie regatta tomorrow.

Sophomore sensations a year ago when they tossed the advance dope overboard, now seasoned campaigners, the champion Columbia Varsity oarsmen stood out today as the favorites again to beat back the challenge of the far west, represented principally by California, and keep the intercollegiate four-mile rowing crown in the east for another year.

The varsity race with seven contenders for the premier honors of the regatta will furnish the climax to a program involving a record-breaking fleet of twenty eight-oared crews.

vantage of the trip east of the Alleghenies to reel off 11 victories in 13 starts—a spurt that carried them into first place in the National League. Pittsburgh's record was seven wins against five losses and Chicago's an even break of six to six. Cincinnati, alone of the western invaders failed to play better than .500 per cent baseball. Strangely enough, the Phillies were the only eastern club that gained better than an even break during the series. Shotton's men recording seven triumphs and five reverses. New York and Brooklyn each dropped seven of 13. Boston was the weak link in the eastern defense, dropping 11 of its 13 games.

INDEPENDENTS IN CLOSE WIN OVER WIRE SCREENERS

Local Teams Played Exceptional Game on New Diamond

The Dixon Independents opened their new field yesterday with a victory over the Wire Screen team, 2 to 1, the game being one of the best played in Dixon in many years. Reddish, the Independents' new pitcher and "Smoky" Joe Miller hooked up in a real pitchers' battle before about 300 fans.

The Independents gave Reddish ragged support at times, but he bore down all the harder at those times—thirteen wire makers left on—the batters showing how he pitched. The Independents made one less hit than the Screens, but they made their bingles when they counted.

In the second Beach singled with two down, stole second and scored on Down's single to center. In the fifth Beach again figured in the scoring, leading off with a single. He went to third on Down's bunt and came home on Scott's sacrifice fly.

The Wire Screens scored their only run in the sixth on a two-bagger by McGintock, an error and a two-base blow by McDonald.

Honors for individual play went to Beach, but the pitchers hogged the limelight. The score:

One of Oldest of A. P. Papers Moves

Chicago, June 18.—(AP)—The Chicago Evening Post, continuously a member of the Associated Press for 34 years, has moved into its new skyscraper building at 211-215 West Wacker drive. Its sixteen years of operation at its old office at 12 South Market street, ended Saturday evening with the publication of its night extra, and this morning giant new presses took up the task with the first run of the Post's early edition.

The new 19-story Post building, with seven stories devoted to the newspaper plant, is described as one of the finest structures of its kind in the country. New equipment has been installed throughout the mechanical departments and the business and editorial offices.

Three basements below the upper level of Wacker drive are given over to paper storage, reel rooms, heating plants, presses, stereotyping machinery and mailing and delivery rooms. The presses are capable of delivering four 32-page sections at a normal speed of 100,000 an hour. The production line from the presses to the delivery trucks is only 37 feet in length, said to be the shortest of any metropolitan newspaper.

Business and administrative offices are on the second floor, with the editorial departments on the fourth and fifth floors. The composing room takes up the entire third floor. 60x150 feet. The engraving department is in the rear of the fourth floor. All floors above the fifth are for lease to private individuals and companies.

The Post is one of the five newspapers in Chicago served by The Associated Press.

It was founded in 1890 by the late James W. Scott, Herman H. Kohlman, deceased, succeeded Mr. Scott as publisher and in turn was succeeded in 1901 by John C. Shaffer, the present publisher. Up to the time of moving into its new building, the Post had occupied five different offices, beginning publication in a building at 20 North Wells street. Mr. Shaffer's son Carroll Shaffer, is general manager of the Post. Charles A. Segner is managing editor, and Frank R. Hussey, business manager.

The Post is independent in politics and in editorial policies. In national campaigns it generally has supported the Republican candidates, although it deviated from that course to support Theodore Roosevelt on the Progressive ticket in 1912.

In connection with its removal to the new building the Post issued a special supplement edition of 80 pages in roto-gravure.

Chicago—Men, too, can change their minds. Dr. William Courtney, who obtained a divorce from his wife in February, proves that that privilege isn't solely in the possession of the fair sex. After divorcing his wife, his lawyer, Walter Hamilton, married her. Now Dr. Courtney wants his wife back, but Hamilton refuses to consent, although the former Mrs. Courtney is eager to return to her first love.

DOLLAR BILLS TABOO IN SILVER TERRITORY
Tonopah, Nev.—(AP)—One and two dollar bills, omen of ill luck to desert rats and miners, are scorned in the vast sage-brush reaches of southern Nevada.

Banks do not carry them to cash small checks or to make change, and most business houses refuse to place any piece of currency under $5 in the cash register.

Before 1917 gold and silver coins were almost the only mediums of exchange.

Aversion to paper money is natural in a region where men live and die for the yellow or silver ore. Southern Nevada owes its place on the map to the coined money.

Today there is an actual boycott on one and two dollar bills in Tonopah and other mining camps of the state. Local banks ship away twice a month the accumulation of that denomination.
